The Reality of Dementia

While in most instances, forgetful moments can just be attributed to aging, dementia is a real and present problem for many seniors. Forgetfulness can be the result of many factors, such as overly tired or stressed, but true dementia differentiates itself when the forgetfulness begins to interfere with an individual's ability to function normally from day to day.

The Reality of Caregiving

Caring for loved ones affected by dementia requires patience and special caregiving skills simply because they may lose the ability to perform daily living activities such as bathing, grooming, and eating by themselves. Skilled care is one of many options for assistance to a Care Giver.

Brandon Court presents new concepts in stimulating skilled nursing care. Friendly and personalized treatment under the direction of the resident's physician is to be given in a manner intended to not only meet our residents' needs for medical care, but to also motivate them to enjoy a full spiritual, social, and recreational life.
